

Immigrants from the Osnabrück Region of Germany

From the records of Trinity Lutheran Church, Cleveland, Ohio

1853 - 1875

Introduction

In 1853 a group of members from Zion Lutheran Church in Cleveland, Ohio formed a mission congregation in the west side of the city, an area known as Ohio City. The pastor of the congregation was the Reverend Johann Christian Wilhelm Lindemann. Trinity Lutheran Church was officially formed in 1858. Pastor Lindemann remained with the congregation until August, 1864, when he was appointed as superintendent of what would later become Concordia Lutheran Theological Seminary. His successor was his friend and colleague, Friedrich Conrad Dietrich Wyneken, who served the congregation until 1875.

Trinity Church was a German Lutheran congregation which joined the Missouri Synod. Many of the members were recent immigrants from regions surrounding Osnabrück, in Hannover, and northeastern Westfalen (Westphalia) just to the east.

In August, 1853 Pastor Lindemann began recording the official acts of the church in a new book. When making the entries he frequently noted the birthplace and in many cases the birth date of the members. Wyneken was not as diligent about recording place names. The inclusion of place names in baptism records stopped immediately after Pastor Lindemann left. They continued to be mentioned occasionally in marriage and death records until the departure of Pastor Wyneken in 1875, when they also stopped. Using these details, one can easily identify those immigrants in German church records.

The first book of Trinity records included entries for baptisms, confirmations, marriages, and burials for the following time periods.

Baptisms: 1853 – 1875

Confirmations: 1854 – 1882

Marriages: 1853 – 1911

Burials: 1853 – 1888

A majority of the immigrants identified in the records were from the Kirchenkreise (church districts) of Melle in Hannover and the districts of Herford and Lübbecke in Westfalen. These districts included villages in the Kreis (county) of Wittlage and Melle in Hannover and the Regierungsbezirk (governing district) of Minden in Westfalen. This region became the target area for the project. All of those church books for the late 18th and 19th centuries are available to view (with a membership plan) on the Archion website (<https://www.archion.de/>).

The author transcribed the entire first book of church records. This information will eventually be available as a searchable database. He then selected marriage records in which one or both of the participants was from the target area. This list was supplemented by parents mentioned in baptism records that included German place names from the same area. Finally, children of those couples found in the baptism records were associated with their parents. Because the baptism records ended in 1875, and no marriage records after that included place names, the author chose 1875 as a cutoff for the records examined for this project.

Using the criteria mentioned above, over 200 couples from the target area were identified using the Trinity records. German church records were then used to discover birth dates for each of the couples. Those records also identified the parents of each person. The birth dates and places for all but a few people were successfully found. The information for the majority of people is assumed to be correct, but it is also probable that there were some incorrect assumptions. The author welcomes any corrections.

The result of this research is a list of German immigrant families who emigrated from the target area to Cleveland roughly between 1840 and 1875. The list includes couples who married in Trinity Church or who had children baptized in the church. In some cases they married in Germany, perhaps had some children there, and then had more children baptized in Trinity Church.

It is important to understand which people are not included in this list. There were certainly many more Germans who immigrated to Cleveland during this time period, including many others from the target region. Some of these people were probably members of other churches. For example, in 1858 twenty families left Trinity to form St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church west of Cleveland in Dover Township. Other members of Trinity were not sufficiently identified in the records to be able to include them in the list. While some immigrants were identified by their place of birth in death records, these were not included in the list. Not all children of the families are included; only those who were baptized in Trinity Church between 1853 and 1875.

Information discovered during research about these people was entered into the FamilySearch family tree. The FamilySearch ID number for each of the couples is included following their names in the list. Much more information about these families can be found in their entries on FamilySearch. The entries frequently include other sources of information about the families. The sources for this list include the Trinity Lutheran Church records (first book), as well as the German church records for the church districts mentioned above.

German researchers from the Osnabrück region can identify many more immigrants to Cleveland and other places in the United States. Although much more information could be discovered about these people, it was not within the scope of this project. Please see the website of the Osnabrück Family Research Working Group (Arbeitskreis Familienforschung Osnabrück e.V. or OSFA) at <https://osfa.de/> for more information about emigrants from this region.

This project began as a result of helping other genealogists to find their ancestral families in Cleveland and Germany. While researching the Frederick John Limpert / Mary Margaret Wulfmann family in Cleveland I discovered that the church records for Trinity Lutheran Church were available online at the FamilySearch website. Mary Margaret's parents were born in Lintorf, Kreis Wittlage. I had previously several other families from Lintorf who settled in New Orleans, Louisiana.

I noticed two things about the Trinity records. First was that Pastor Lindemann recorded the date and place of birth for many of the people. Secondly, a large number of those people were from other villages surrounding Lintorf – in both Hannover and Westfalen. I thought it would be very useful to transcribe the Trinity records so others would have easy access to the information. Irmtraud Tiemann of the OSFA suggested that perhaps I could present the information in the form of a family book. I decided to use a format that I found in family books that were privately published by my friend and colleague Gerhard Höh from Höhenöid, near Pirmasens.

Many of the German names found in the Osnabrück region were spelled and pronounced differently once the immigrants arrived in Cleveland. Some were just Anglicized versions of the name. However, others were completely transformed. This is especially true of the “double” names found in the region. For example, Johannschröder became just Schröder (or Schroeder). Schmidt became Smith and Koch was pronounced and spelled as Cook. The spelling changes were particularly found in official government documents and census records. Tombstones would often reflect the original spelling.

I attempted to use the original surname as the primary name in the table. For those name changes that are not obvious, I included the altered surname in parentheses. If the given name and surname were different than the birth name for the husband and wife, I included one version of their Anglicized name as an alias. There could have been several variant spellings. I did not do the same for the children.

For the married couples, most of the birth dates were found in German records. The marriage dates were found in Trinity or German church records, as well as Cuyahoga County marriage records, which can be found on FamilySearch. I also attached death dates for most people when I could find them in other sources.
